Teen programs continue to go well, as well as OTAB and their activities. The member of OTAB who had planned to run Team B DnD in October had to back out at the last moment for personal reasons. This ended up being a good thing, however: another teen had put together an adventure they wanted to run for the group, so they were able to pivot into running it on October 30th like they wanted. It ended up going very well, with the teens present enjoying the game. I supervised the group and assisted as needed. OTAB also helped decorate a trunk for Trunk or Treat, and a current senior from Olean High School volunteered to help staff it throughout the night. (Photos attached). The group received many compliments on their trunk. One of our OTAB members also worked with Chad and myself to host a Roblox tournament for teens on Friday, November 8. Eight teens participated, and Chad and I were on hand with Jackbox games and 3D printing pens to entertain those who were waiting their turn in the tournament.

OTAB will be assisting me in running Friendsgiving next week, helping coordinate what food will be offered and drumming up interest from other teens to attend. As of this report, five teens have registered to attend and four more have expressed interest. They also have decided on December 11th for their annual Teen Holiday party here at the library. I'll be pausing most teen programs (gaming club, anime club, dnd, etc) in December as attendance for teen programs in the second half of the month is always extremely low to nonexistent.

For adults, the Adult DnD group remains my largest adult program. They meet again on November 12th. Knit and Crochet averages 2-5 attendees each month, and Brown Bag remains steady with the usual group. They'll be deciding on their 2025 reads at their next meeting.
